

CELEBRATING ONE YEAR AT PENNICHUCK: A LOOK BACK

In early June, I had the joy of celebrating my first work anniversary at Pennichuck! It is hard to believe how quickly this year has flown by, and even harder to say just how much I have learned and experienced in such a short time.

This past year, I have been able to share bits and pieces of this journey through writing. Pennichuck's blog, Pennichuck Water Words, has allowed me to reflect and keep track of day-to-day experiences that have shaped my first year here.

So, in celebration of this milestone, here is a look back at a few of the blogs I have written along the way:

The First Day

This blog entry was the start of Pennichuck Water Words. In this entry, I recapped the feelings and emotions about starting a new job. It is crazy to look back at this blog and see how much I have grown since starting here. Knowing nothing about the Water Industry to now having known a lot more, with even more knowledge to learn.

Making Water Work: Communications

In this post, I pulled back the curtain on what Communications looks like at Pennichuck. This was the start of a sub-series within the blog called Making Water Work. In this series, my goal was to enlighten people on just how many job opportunities can be found in this industry. They all have a role to play in providing communities of New Hampshire with clean and safe drinking water.

The Recap

Written near the end of 2024, this post reflected on my first six months at Pennichuck, what I learned, the opportunities I had, and what I was looking forward to next. When I first started, I would not have imagined the unique opportunities presented to me within my first year.

These stories have reminded me how important it is to share experiences to bring light and perspective to the water industry. As I embark on year two, I am excited to continue learning, writing, and helping tell the stories that flow behind the scenes.

Thanks for reading, and thank you to everyone who has been part of my first year here. Here's to many more!
